

In response to the comments of the student delegates and the POLIS feedback survey of April-May 2019, we are bringing in the following changes to POLIS courses from this year:

- Introduced optional course sections in POL4 and POL16 that raise issues from the politics of Latin America, a region that was previously largely absent from POLIS programme.
- Created a new option on the international governance of climate change in POL3, and made ecology a much more central theme in POL11.
- Brought in an optional section on Western Europe in POL4.
- Introduced a new training programme for all POL1 supervisors, to ensure all supervisors are familiar with the range and themes of the paper as it has continued to develop.
- Many more specific suggestions and criticisms were acted on, listed at:
