Introduction to the paper

European politics has always been a vibrant subject, and one that has been in considerable flux in recent years. In fact, the word ‘crisis’ is frequently used to describe various aspects of European politics – from the ‘crisis of the post-war settlement’ and the ‘crisis of the welfare state’ to the ‘crisis of political parties’, the ‘Eurozone crisis’, and the ‘migration crisis’. Most recently, the UK’s departure from the European Union has raised profound questions about the relationship between Britain and continental Europe, the effectiveness of the UK’s political institutions, and the long-term prospects of both the UK and the EU.

POL13 examines these issues through two modules, one on British Politics and one on the Politics of the European Union. The examination takes the form of an undivided paper, so students can specialize in one module or study them in combination. The British Politics module explores political developments in the UK since 1945, including the rise of Thatcherism and New Labour, devolution and constitutional reform, economic and social policy, and changes in electoral behaviour. The Politics of the European Union module examines key aspects of the history and politics of European integration, such as the nature of the European Union, the distribution of power within (and political mobilisation against) the EU, policy-making and the EU’s responses to crises. The paper will enable students to engage critically with the scholarly literature in these fields and to develop a comparative and historical perspective on British and European politics. The paper is undivided, so students may opt to focus entirely on British Politics or the European Union or to take three supervisions in each module.

Prerequisites and Background Reading

There are no formal prerequisites for this paper, but students who took either the Western Europe module or the United States and United Kingdom module in the POL4 paper last year will find that they provide some useful background information.

Students are strongly encouraged to develop their general understanding of the post-war political history of Britain and/or the European Union (as appropriate) before the start of Michaelmas Term, so that they are ready to engage with the supervision topics at an appropriate level of sophistication. Reading textbooks and general histories is one way of doing this, but diaries and memoirs can also provide valuable insights into how politics and policy-making worked.

Teaching arrangements

The teaching for this paper consists of lectures and supervisions spread across Michaelmas and Lent Terms, and one or more Easter Term revision classes. There will be 32 lectures in total – 16 on British Politics and 16 on the Politics of the European Union.

Students will be asked to indicate by the start of Michaelmas Term whether they wish to focus entirely on British Politics or the Politics of the European Union, or to have three supervisions in each module. Supervision capacity on this paper is limited, so we may not be able to accommodate late changes.

Mock written examination for 2022/23

Students taking the written exam should answer three questions, which may be taken from either section.

Note that the structure of POL13 has changed several times in recent years, to take account of student feedback and academic leave patterns; the mock exam paper below has been designed with this year's paper in mind. On the British Politics side, there will be one question on each of the 10 supervision topics, though students should note that some of these topics are very broad, and the questions may therefore be rather different to those which they have tackled for supervision essays.

Section A: British Politics

1. How far does 'class politics' explain the policies pursued by EITHER the Labour governments of 1945-51 OR the Conservative governments of 1951-64?
2. Is the collapse of the 'post-war settlement' in 1970s Britain best explained by economic crisis, social change, or political malaise?
3. What, if anything, was conservative about 'Thatcherism'?
4. How far did the Labour governments of 1997-2010 fulfil what they had promised?
5. Do recent election results in Britain suggest that parties should focus on winning the 'median voter'?
6. How and why has the 'core executive' changed since 1997? You may, if you wish, focus your answer on one or more prime ministers.

7. 'The concept of parliamentary sovereignty was fatally weakened, not by EU membership, but by constitutional reality.' (Fergal Davis) Do you agree?
8. What lessons can we learn from comparing devolved governance in Scotland, Wales, and Northern Ireland?
9. Has the impact of immigration on post-war British politics been overstated?
10. Why has the Conservative Party dominated British politics since 2010?

Section B: The Politics of the European Union

11. What explains EITHER the origins OR the development of the European Union?
12. What is the value of integration theory?
13. Who or what drives the integration process?
14. How have inter-institutional relations changed over time?
15. EITHER Is the EU democratic? OR Is democratic backsliding in the EU reversible?
16. 'Economic and monetary union is a political not an economic project.' Discuss.
17. How effective is European foreign policy? OR What are the impediments to European asylum and immigration policy?
18. What accounts for EU enlargement?
19. Have crises strengthened or weakened the European Union? Answer with reference to two or more crises.
20. Is the time ripe for institutional reform in Europe?

Section A. British Politics

This section of the paper explores politics and government in modern Britain from four different perspectives. Firstly, it examines the historical background to contemporary British politics, from the apparent stability of the post-war ‘golden age’, through the multiple crises of the 1970s, to the social and economic changes associated with Margaret Thatcher and the emergence of New Labour. Secondly, it considers what these changes have meant for the British constitution, the distribution of power within (and between) Whitehall and Westminster, and the making of public policy. Thirdly, it explores the political implications of the devolution settlement and the challenges which Scottish, Welsh, and Irish nationalism pose to the future of the United Kingdom. Finally, it examines recent developments in electoral politics (including the 2017 and 2019 general elections) and asks how they might prompt us to refine existing theories about voting behaviour and the changing role of parties. The section thus enables students to develop a detailed understanding of post-war British political history and to set contemporary academic debates in a wider context.

Section B. The History and Politics of the European Union (Professor Julie Smith)

This section of the paper seeks to provide students with an understanding of the origins and development of the European Union, why it was created and the forces that led to its expansion and increasing role in a variety of policy areas. It covers the institutions and decision-making arrangements in the EU, the role of Member States and the theories used to explain them. It then looks at key aspects of policy-making before turning to the vexed issues of the EU's difficulties in facing the range of crises that have faced it over the last decade, including the Eurozone and refugee crises and the prospect of the first state ever leaving the Union following the UK's 2016 referendum on membership.

Recommended Textbooks

The following books cover many of the issues raised in the EU module and form a good starting point for more specialised reading.

- Ramona Coman, Amandine Crespy and Vivien A. Schmidt, Governance and Politics in the Post-Crisis European Union (Cambridge: Cambridge University Press, 2020)
- Michelle Cini and Nieves Péres-Solórzano Borragán, eds., European Union Politics (Oxford: Oxford University Press, 6th edition, 2019), includes chapters of relevance to several topics in this part of the paper
- Helen Wallace, Mark A. Pollack, Christilla Roederer-Rynning and Alasdair R. Young (eds), Policy-Making in the European Union (Oxford: OUP, 8th edition, 2020). This book offers scholarly analyses of an extensive range of EU policies and at the same time gives theoretical insights into the integration process.

2. Institutions (Lecture 3)

Is the relationship between the central institutions best understood as cooperative or competitive?

OR Can the European Commission still be characterised as a 'motor of integration'?

Readings

4. Theorising European Integration (Lecture 5)

What lessons, if any, does neofunctionalism offer to students of European integration in the 21st Century?

Can any theory of integration effectively challenge the dominance of Liberal Intergovernmentalism?

What purpose do theories of integration serve?

Readings

Please note that this is an extensive reading list, including a lot of starred items. You should consider them as feeding into other topics for this module – don't worry if you can't read them all for one supervision on Theory, but do consider reading them over the course of the academic year, as they can help support an understanding of the wider integration process. Similarly, you may wish to return to the theory lectures at the end of the module. Please note also that some of the articles in the policy-making and crises sections are also theory-driven. You should see these topics as inter-connected.

D. Foreign policy, enlargement and conditionality (Lectures 9 & 11)

Is EU foreign policy anything more than rhetorical?

OR Has the EU reached the limits of enlargement?

OR 'The ENP represents the EU's continuing desire to exert leverage over its neighbours. As such, it is doomed to fail.' Discuss.

7. Dealing with Crises (Lectures 14 & 15) (Again students may wish to do more than one supervision within this group, as there is a range of crises to consider)

Why is the EU so poor at tackling crises? Answer with reference to two or more crises.

OR How far have crises helped forge the modern EU?
